

prompt vs brief

You write Claude prompts.

Operators write it a brief. Same model, far better first draft.

 Message to Claude

BRIEF

write me a cold email

THE PROMPT

BECOMES ↓

TASK

Cold email to a SaaS founder, step 1 of 3

CONTEXT

AI GTM tool. ICP: 2 to 50 person teams

STANDARD

Under 80 words. One ask. My voice

OUTCOME

A reply that books a call. Not a sale

Four parts. Always.

TASKWhat, exactly

one job, scoped, no "and also"

01

CONTEXTWho and for whom your business, the audience, the offer

02

STANDARDWhat good looks like

length, tone, format, hard rules

03

OUTCOMEThe finish line

what the output has to achieve

04

What the prompt skips

THE PROMPT

✗ Vague task

✗ No context

✗ No standard

✗ No finish line

THE BRIEF

✓ Specific task

✓ Your context

✓ Clear standard

✓ Defined outcome

The output changes

First-try usable

kill the rounds of edits

~~5-redos~~ → 1

On-brand by default

your voice is in the brief

~~generic~~ → yours

Knows when to stop

the outcome ends the loop

~~rambles~~ → lands

Reusable forever

save it, change one line, run again

1 = ∞

Stop prompting. Start briefing.

STEP 1

Name the task and the outcome

what it does, what it has to achieve

STEP 2

Hand it your context and standard audience, offer, length, tone, rules

STEP 3

Save it, reuse it, edit one line

one brief, infinite first drafts

SAVE THIS, THEN

Comment BRIEF for my 4-part brief template

