

ONE AFTERNOON

TWELVE TABS. ONE BOX.

You are not paying for tools. You are paying for tabs.

Every one of them holds a piece of your context and none of them share it.

THE AUDIT

WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OPEN.

Count the ones you touched this week. It is never twelve.

The rest are a subscription and a login you have stopped noticing.

PAID FOR 12 on the card every month

OPENED

4

in the last seven days

SHARED CONTEXT

0

none of them talk

TIME LOST

Daily

pasting between them

THE MOVE

THE WORK GOES IN ONE PLACE.

Same jobs. One input. Memory underneath all of it.

Research, outbound, deals, content and code, one keystroke apart.

ONE INPUT

plain English, no picker

ONE MEMORY

profile, facts, open work

ONE GATE

nothing sends without you

THE ROUTING

THE JOB PICKS THE MODEL.

You stop deciding which one is smart enough today.

Lite for lookups, Smart for the standing work, Deep when judgement is hard.

01

It reads the job first volume, depth, cost of being wrong

02

Then it picks the tier

per turn, not per user

03

You never choose again

and never overpay for a lookup

THE CANCEL

THE PART THAT HURTS NOBODY.

Eight subscriptions you will not miss by Friday.

Keep the two that do something nothing else does. Cancel the rest.

WHAT ACTUALLY CHANGED

THE STACK STOPPED BEING YOUR JOB.

You were the integration layer. That was the problem.

Twelve tools with no shared memory made you the thing that carried context.
